The Bishop's Weekly Chat With You.

My dear Flock:

On the fifth anniversary of my consecration as Bishop of the Diocese of Fort Wayne, I beg to greet all under my jurisdiction. It seems as of yesterday that I assumed the onerous duties of the episcopal office. If the time has seemed to vanish so fast it is not because a Bishop's life is so pleasant, but rather because it is so crowded with work. The busier a man is the faster the time seems to pass. Both priests and people have sought to make me happy in my work, especially by cooperating with me for the advancement of measures spiritual and financial.

During this brief interval I have dedicated twenty-two new churches and twenty-six new schools; several new hospitals and other institutions. Some new parishes have been started. While all this denotes progress the Bishop does not claim much credit for any of it. Most of it is due to the priests and to sisters of several Religious Communities. We have admitted three Religious Orders of priests into the diocese during these five years, namely, the Redemptorists, the Capuchins, and the Hungarian Franciscans. It is expected that a branch of Slovak Franciscans will establish themselves in Lake County, who will offer invaluable assistance to pastors and people in that region.

Now evidently the diocese as such has had to look after its needs, which relate (1) to the securing of an ample number of vocations to the holy priesthood; (2) to the securing of sufficient funds to educate ecclesiastical students; (3) to the securing of money for the replacement of our Orphan Asylums, now both crowded as well as antiquated. Considerable success has been attained in these directions, but much is still to be done. Candidates for the priesthood in the Preparatory Seminary have increased tenfold; we have made great strides in our efforts to place the support of students on a sound basis; and our Orphan Building Fund is growing.

The pastors and people of every parish must become imbued with the conviction that diocesan interests, which they all have in common, must have the same support which things of local interest have. Just as every community must render service, financial and otherwise, to the state to which it belongs and to the national government to which the state belongs, so must every parish render assistance, spiritual and financial, to the diocese of which it is a unit, and to the universal Church to which the diocese belongs.

The priests of the Diocese of Fort Wayne, for the most part, easily sense the Bishop's viewpoint, and knowing that his motives are unselfish, get behind him, and I beg, after experiencing five years of such cooperation, to thank them.

I desire also to thank you, my dear people, and I ask your prayers for guidance and strength in order that I may duly acquit myself of the responsibilities that have been imposed on me both in relation to God and to your immortal souls.

Sincerely in Christ,

John Francis Noll
Bp. of Ft. Wayne

Father John Guendling Reaches Golden Jubilee

No priest in the Diocese of Fort Wayne is known so well, or remembered so fondly as the Reverend John H. Guendling, retired.

Father Guendling was, in turn, Chaplain of St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Lafayette; pastor of the Cathedral and Vicar General of the Diocese, Administrator of the Diocese during the illness of the late Bishop Rademacher as well as after his death until the appointment of his successor. Later he had temporary charge of St. John's Church, Goshen, Indiana, and then was transferred to St. Charles' Church, Peru, where he held an irremovable rectorship. Sickness which interferred with his work occasioned his retirement from active service more than five years ago, since which time he has been living at the Motherhouse of the Sisters of St. Francis, Lafayette.

While weak in body, Father Guendling's mind is very alert, and his memory, universally known to have been marvelous, has lost none of its powers of retention.

Father Guendling has been unable to say Mass for several years, and it is for this reason that he has not had a purple investiture. The Bishop has received a special blessing from the Holy Father for Father Guendling, and we hope that his every priest acquaintance will write him a letter of felicitation and a promise of prayers. Even though Father John, as all were wont to call him, may not be attached to life here, we wish him "ad multos annos".

Sister M. Virginia of Fort Wayne Succumbs

Sister Mary Virginia, 29, known in Fort Wayne as Miss Virginia Foohey, member of a prominent family and for ten years a member of the Order of the Sisters of Providence, died at 9:45 o'clock Friday night, June 20, at the motherhouse of the community, St. Mary-of-the-Woods, Vigo county, Ind. In failing health since September, she had been a patient at St. Mary's for four months. A musician of unusual ability, Sister Mary Virginia had been engaged as a teacher in the department of music at Marywood, a leading academy in Indianapolis. It was following a notable recital at this school that her breakdown in February occurred. Since that time her health had declined rapidly.

Born and reared in Fort Wayne she received her education at St. Augustine's Academy, continuing her collegiate work and advanced course in music at St. Mary's, where she entered the community. Timothy Foohey, her father, died four and a half years ago.

Surviving are her mother, Mrs. Mary E. Foohey, of 1614 Forest Park; three sisters, Misses Agnes, Florence and Aletha; a brother, James Foohey, at home; a brother, William Foohey, Wilmington, Del.; two half-brothers, John M. and Michael J. Foohey, Fort Wayne; five half-sisters, Sister St. Margaret of the Sisters of Providence; Mrs. Anna Logan, Fort Wayne; Mrs. Hanna Galvin, Mrs. Thomas McGraw, Champaign, Ill.; Miss Margaret Foohey, Los Angeles, Cal.; a grandmother, Mrs. Mary A. Logan, and an aunt, Miss Margaret Logan, of 224 Baker St., Fort Wayne. Another aunt is Sister M. Eugenia of the Sisters of Providence, who, with Sister Angele, a cousin, also Mrs. Foohey and family, were at the bedside of Sister Mary Virginia when she died.

Slovaks Preparing To Celebrate Their Eleventh Anniversary

Prague.—The Slovaks are preparing to celebrate in a fitting manner the 11th centenary of the church at Nitra, which was founded by the Slav prince Pribina in 830, and consecrated by Adalram, Archbishop of Salzurg. It is one of the oldest churches in Czechoslovakia.

Pribina had been under German sovereignty, but the German priests had had little influence upon the people. Christianity made greater progress in these regions after the arrival from Constantinople of Sts. Cyril and Methodius in the territory of Rastislaw, prince of Moravia, which adjoined the lands of Pribina.

Slovakia boasts of a Christian civilization that is more than 11 centuries old. Its neighbor, Hungary, was not Christianized until a century later.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS MAKE BIG ADVANCE IN THE PAST YEAR

They Gain 121,766 Pupils, a Five Per Cent Advance—One Hundred and Sixty-two New Schools Erected—Catholic Elementary Schools Now Have Attendance of 2,201,942.

Washington.—A total of 2,544,785 students were enrolled in the 10,249 Catholic schools of all classifications that existed in 1928, it is shown by a survey just completed by the Department of Education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, for the forthcoming issue of the Directory of Catholic Colleges and Schools. The Catholic schools, in that year, were staffed with a total of 82,536 instructors.

Compared with the figures for 1926, the year of the last previous survey, the 1928 results reveal the following facts:

A gain of 162, or 1.6 per cent, in the total number of Catholic schools; a gain of 5,192, or 6.7 per cent, in the total number of instructors, and a gain of 121,766, or 5 per cent, in the total number of students in attendance.

Showing of Educational Institutions

The latest survey, treating of the educational institutions under their various classifications, reveals the following facts for 1928:

There were a total of 189 seminaries in the United States. These were divided into 95 major seminaries staffed with 790 instructors and with 6,527 students enrolled, and 94 minor seminaries staffed with 1,103 instructors and with 10,542 students enrolled. The total enrollment for both classes of seminaries was 17,079 in 1928, or, compared with 1926, a gain of 1,233 students, or 7.8 per cent, in enrollment.

The normal schools totalled 79, and were staffed with 1,314 instructors. The total enrollment was 13,002 students, of whom 597 were male and 12,405 female. The total enrollment of normal schools dropped 2,567 students, or 16.1 per cent, compared to 1926. Of the total number of normal schools, only 10 were for religious men, while 69 were for religious women. In the former, the instructors totalled 236, and in the latter, 1,078.

Catholic colleges and universities totalled 159. They were staffed with 6,790 instructors, and were attended by 86,306 students. The total enrollment in these institutions shows the largest percentage of gain when compared with the results of the 1926 survey. The total enrollment in this class of schools increased by 11,547 students, or 15.3 per cent, between 1926 and 1928. These schools were attended by a total of 67,973 male students and a total of 18,333 female students. The colleges were divided into 75 men's colleges and 84 women's colleges.

In the 1928 reports on enrollment from schools of all classes, a total of 805,472 male students and a total of 849,800 female students were reported. However, there were 889,513 students whose sex was not stated in the reports.

RT. REV. J. H. SCHLARMAN

Bishop of Peoria Consecrated by Card. Mundelein

Rt. Rev. J. H. Schlarman, of Belleville, Ill., Elevated to Episcopacy In Colorful Ceremony—Bishop Griffin Preaches—Reception to Cardinal

Belleville, Ill.—The Rt. Rev. J. H. Schlarman was solemnly consecrated Bishop of Peoria recently. His Eminence, George Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, was the consecrator, and the ceremony took place in the Cathedral of St. Peter where Monsignor Schlarman had been stationed.

The arrival of His Eminence, Cardinal Mundelein is said to have marked the first visit of a Cardinal to Belleville, and the people of the city, regardless of creed, turned out to do honor to the Prince of the Church and to the new Bishop. Several thousand people, including the Rt. Rev. Henry Althoff, Bishop of Belleville, and Mayor Charles Stegmeier, greeted His Eminence upon his arrival at the station. Virtually the entire population took part in the subsequent reception, a feature of which was a parade that escorted the Cardinal to Bishop Althoff's residence. An army blimp flew over the route of the welcoming procession and dropped flowers along the line of march. Later the people of Belleville entertained the Cardinal, the Bishops and some 550 members of the clergy at a banquet.

Consecration Ceremonies

At the consecration Bishop Althoff and the Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, Bishop of Rockford, assisted His Eminence, as co-consecrators. The Rt. Rev. James A. Griffin, Bishop of Springfield in Illinois, preached the sermon.

An Archbishop, 20 Bishops, two abbots, 50 monsignori and hundreds of priests marched with the Cardinal in the procession to the Cathedral.

Murillo Mosaic, Gift of Pope to Shrine, Arrives

Bishop Shahan Issues Statement In Which He Tells How Inspiration To Build Shrine Came To Him And Of Interest Of Popes In Project.

Washington.—The "heart" of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception arrived here recently. It is the magnificent mosaic reproduction of Murillo's painting, "The Immaculate Conception," which His Holiness, Pope Pius XI, had made in the Vatican mosaic factory as his personal gift to the great church that is being erected here. Those in charge of the work assert that this mosaic, which has been more than five years in the making, is the most important single gift from an independent sovereign ever to arrive in this country from Europe.

The mosaic arrived at the Shrine, on the campus of the Catholic University of America, at high noon. Because of its great size and its enormous weight of more than three tons, the assistance of machinery and a large corps of men was required to bring the priceless art object to the Shrine proper. Almost immediately men were set to work setting up the special shrine, in which the mosaic is to be fixed, on a spot which will be almost the exact center of the great edifice when it is completed. Ultimately, the great mosaic is to be established in the upper church, in close relationship to the main altar.

Cabled Pope of Safe Arrival

Recently the Right Rev. Bishop Thomas J. Shahan, Rector Emeritus of the Catholic University of America and Founder of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, and the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Bernard A. McKenna, Director of the Shrine, cabled to His Eminence, Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, announcing the safe arrival of the great mosaic, conveying the deepest gratitude to His Holiness, and imploring the Apostolic Benediction.

The arrival of the mosaic made a memorable day in the history of the Shrine. To mark the arrival, Bishop Shahan issued a statement to

TOUCHING SCENE AS POPE RECEIVES CHILDREN'S GIFT

Holy Father Makes Intimate Talk to Little Well-Wishers After Smilingly Listening to Their Spokesman.

Rome.—There has taken place in recent days in the Eternal City a very touching incident in which the Holy Father was the chief figure and 2,000 little children took part, and in which American Catholics will be particularly interested since, in a way, it was of their making.

It was one of those happenings which are small if measured by the every-day scale of reckoning, but really have a deep and impressing significance. Particularly, it served to present an intimate personal side of the present Holy Father which is not so often made known to the public because of the host of formal occasions through which the Pope is commonly judged. It showed forth his way with children.

It was on the day after His Holiness' seventy-third birthday at the beginning of this month. He had chosen this day on which to receive the pupils—some two thousand little girls and boys—of the Pontifical Oratorio di San Pietro, the magnificent work inaugurated and maintained in Rome by the Knights of Columbus with the encouragement of Pope Pius XI.

Drawn up in the Sala Ducale, the youngsters stood in the charge of the priests of the Congregation and of the Sisters, the Daughters of Charity, who devote themselves to the moral and physical well-being of the children of that part of Rome nearest to the Vatican City.

Greeting to Officials

In the adjoining Sala dei Paramenti, whose walls are adorned with splendid tapestries, the coming of the Pope was awaited by the President of the Oratorio di San Pietro, Monsignor Francis Borgogini Duca, Archbishop of Heraclea and Apostolic Nuncio to the King of Italy; Edward Leo Hearn, European representative of the Knights of Columbus; Msgr. Alfred Ottaviani, representing the Papal Secretariat of State; and Msgr. Francis Joseph Spellman of Boston, Domestic Prelate and official of the Papal Secretariat of State.

His Holiness, before entering the audience salon, paused for some time to speak to these personages, especially addressing words of benevolence to Mr. Hearn both for himself and for the great institution he represented. He then passed into the large salon where the great group of children awaited him.

On his arrival, the Pope was greeted with loud applause and cries of Evviva. While he was taking his place on the throne, with the Maestro di Camera, Monsignor Caccia Dominioni, and the monsignors and chamberlains on duty at his sides, all the children sang the Oratorio hymn beautifully. Meanwhile the Pope had invited Archbishop Borgongini, Mr. Hearn and Monsignors Ottaviani and Spellman to sit at the sides of the throne.

When the hymn was ended two little children advanced—a boy named Ferruccio Carli and a girl Elena Galliani, each nine years old—carrying a basket in which stood a large terracotta box of the inexpensive sort used by children, with the difference that it was gilded and decorated with a view of St. Peter's Square.

Children Present Gift

Putting the box on the floor, the boy addressed brief words of greeting to the Pope, recalling the many proofs of kindness given the Oratorio di San Pietro, among them the memorable inaugurating of his Jubilee Year in November, 1928, by distributing in the Vatican Basilica First Communion to 120 boys and girls of the Oratorio. The boyish speaker had been among these latter.

Then, indicating the box, the lad said, evidently using his own words:

"Among these soldi (small Italian coins, with which the box was filled) there are none given by the priests or by the Sisters, and even none by the Knights of Columbus, but only ours—those that we children have put by, day by day. I bet it is the smallest offering that Your Holiness has received during Jubilee Year. But we offer it with all the love of our hearts."

The Pope listened and smiled.

"Holy Father, do you not sense the odor of bruscolini, caramels and licorice that comes from these soldi? Because they were all soldi given us to buy these candies, and we have denied ourselves to give them to you. It is very little, but you, in your goodness, will kindly accept our thought and the sacrifice accompanying it."

The Pope still listened and smiled. Then, when the children had finished, he bade them come up to him, blessed them and patted them benevolently on the head.

Then, in an affectionate, friendly—one might say intimate—tone, he began to speak to the throng of children about him. In was almost a patriarchal scene, and at once there sprang to mind these great words: "Suffer little children to come unto Me."

CORPUS CHRISTI CELEBRATION IN THE SEE CITY

Thousands Gather Adoring Eucharist at Open Air Observance in Ft. Wayne.

All the solemnity of the Mass, all the color and pageantry of Catholic liturgy and processional were emphasized Sunday morning at Ft. Wayne's first open-air Corpus Christi observance in which 11 city parishes participated. A crowd estimated at 8,000 gathered in the grove adjoining St. Vincent's Orphan home and there in prayerful adoration and hymns of praise made public profession of faith in that fundamental truth and basic doctrine of Catholicism, the Real Presence of Jesus Christ in the most blessed Sacrament.

The universality of this celebration was emphasized by the Rt. Rev. John Francis Noll, D. D., Bishop of Fort Wayne, in his brief message to the concourse when he observed that similar observances of Corpus Christi were being held on Sunday in all parts of the world; that mighty processions marked the festal day throughout Europe where Catholics are numerous. It was at the instance of the prelate that the Fort Wayne inter-parish celebration was arranged, proving so successful that its conduct annually is favored.

Altars in Grove.

From the vicinity of the main building the ground takes a sloping trend until the grove is reached and there in a natural sanctuary on the highest point stood the beautiful main altar under a canvas canopy concealed by artistic drapings in the Papal colors, yellow and white. An immense painting of "The Last Supper" hung over red velvet curtains formed the appropriate background. White lilies and golden hued roses spent their transient beauty on the altar throne, candles gleamed in readiness for the services. To the right and left and slightly beyond the altar, palms and ferns formed a luxuriant setting. Immediately to the left was the Bishop's throne sheltered by a canopy in yellow and white, and opposite the places for the officers of the Mass. Above the entrance to the altar was the gold-lettered inscription, "Come, Let Us Praise the Lord With Joy."

An Imposing Procession.

As the bells of St. Vincent's chimed a jubilant message, the procession which had formed in the cement court north of the main building, proceeded directly east to the main altar in the grove. A banner of the Blessed Sacrament and an American flag were borne at the head of a group of 150 altar boys from the local parishes. The boys were robed in cassock and surplice and a group of little cardinals carried processional lights. Nearly 140 little girls of St. Vincent's home, attired in white, several carrying lovely hand painted banners, were in line. Fourteen little maids held yellow and white crepe baskets filled with flower petals, which were later strewed in the path of the Eucharistic King.

William Richmond headed a large group of members of Anthony Wayne assembly, fourth degree, Knights of Columbus. Visiting fourth degree members included James Coughlin of Garrett.

Solemn Mass Celebrated.

Solemn High Mass, Coram Episcopo (in the presence of the Bishop), were celebrated by the V. Rev. Msgr. Charles H. Thiele, rector of St. Peter's church. Father Conroy, Cathedral rector, was assistant priest; the Bishop on the throne was attended by uated on a tract of 420 acres, is said to be the most beautiful and extensive group of biuldings belonging to the Brothers in the United States.

St. John Baptist De La Salle, founder of the Institute, was born in the city of Rheims, in 1651, of a family highly distinguished in the magistracy. He is described as a highly intelligent youth who manifested an attraction for the priesthood from his earliest days. He was ordained to the priesthood in the Cathedral of Rheims, in 1678.

About a year after his ordination, the younger priest, through a trifling and peculiar incident, became interested in the education of youth. An elderly man, accompanied by a youthful assistant, came to Rheims to establish a small school for the children of the town. The traveler carried a letter of introduction to the Abbe De La Salle from a relative who resided in Paris. The future Saint gladly gave the stranger the assistance he desired in opening a little school, after which he withdrew quietly and left the control of the new venture to its originator.

The originator of the school, a Mr. Nyel and an excellent character, opened two or three more schools and seems to have made the mistake of concerning himself with the establishment of new schools rather than with the consolidation of those schools he already had established. The inexperienced teachers he employed, seeing themselves overwhelmed by difficulties and apparently forsaken, lost heart and thought of abandoning their classes entirely. The Abbe De La Salle, observing that Mr. Nyel's little schools had succeeded in effecting some good among the children, begged the teachers not to abandon their posts. He also appealed to Mr. Nyel to devote himself to the schools already founded. This appeal was in vain, however, as Mr. Nyel felt that he was called upon to open schools in other cities. He begged the priest to look after the schools in Rheims while he was busy elsewhere. The priest, not wishing to see the Rheims schools perish, promised to assist the teachers in these schools until Mr. Nyel should return which he never did.

The baptismal name of the Abbe De La Salle was John Baptist, for that noted Saint was one of the great Patrons of France and his name was given very frequently at baptism. The Saint's feast day is celebrated by the Church on June 24, and the Abbe De La Salle, through devotion to his patron, placed important acts under his protection by performing them on that day. Accordingly he arranged to have the somewhat forlorn teachers of Mr. Nyel's schools take their meals at his house every day, beginning on the feast of St. John the Baptist. He did this that he might discuss with them the problems confronting them in their schools, and at the same time give them the benefit of his observations and suggestions.

This first step by the Abbe De La Salle led to a union between himself and the teachers that became constantly closer. On St. John's Day, he brought the teachers to his home to live altogether, and, on the same day, in the next year, left his family and paternal home entirely, to live in community with the teachers in a house he rented.

Abbe De La Salle's Long Apostolate

In the beginning, it is said, the Saint had no intention whatever of devoting his life to the Christian education of the poor, or of founding a religious order. In later years he often said that God had mercifully hidden from him the sad trials that lay in wait for him during the next 40 years. But the Lord, it has been said, led the Saint so gradually into the work that he never realized whither he was bound until he was so deeply committed to the enterprise that it was impossible for him to retrace his steps. Now, with the perspective of the past so clearly enrolled, it is held evident that the real foundation of the Christian Brothers' Institute dates from that eventful day in 1680, when the Saint, despite the opposition of his aristocratic family, brought the poor schoolmasters to his own table. That day marked not only a turning point in the life of the holy priest, but also the beginning of a new era in the history of Christian education in the Catholic Church.

When the great founder of the Institute lay dying, in 1719, after a heart-breaking apostolate of 40 years, his religious family comprised 27 houses and nearly 300 Brothers living under a regular, definite rule. Since that time it has developed steadily, and now has spread far beyond what the humble Saint ever imagined, or dared to hope for.
